The Clay Minstrel: or, National Songster, to which is prefixed a Selectin of the Lite, Public Services, and Character of Henry Clay. By John S. Littel, President of the Clay Club of Germantown, Pa.

Advertisement to the First Edition.

"It occurred to the Editor of the Minstrel, that a publication upon the plan of that now offered to the public would be acceptable, and might be useful at the present juncture; and finding that his design was approved by friends whose political experience gave increased value to their opinions, he prepared the brief and suppretending Sketch that follows, of the life of Mr. Clay. He takes pleasure in stating that he is much rudebted to the researches of Mr. Prentice and of Mr. E. Sargent, whose comprehensive and interesting biographies are alike creditable to their talents and worthy of their subject; and all whose curiosity may be sharpened and excited by the imperfect glimpses of the illustrious Statesman, afforded through the following pages, will find in them more full and circumstantial information than could be embraced within the sarrow limits and unambitious design of this publication. the narrow limits and unambitious design of this publication rage have so long enveloped the subject, but which, even now, are gradually rising and rolling away beneath the influence of revealing light, and of that "truth which is mighty and will

The Songs are by various authors. Song of them have been written expressly for the Minstrel; others have been gleaned from the public journals, and other publications of the day.

The Mysterious Engine.—This wonderful engine is the most beneficial invention in steam since the first discovery of steam power. An engine on this plan, of one hundred horse power, will not use more steam and fuel than one of the ordinary engines of twenty five horse, thus making a gain of seventy five per cent. We understand there are two boats to be body to per cent. be bailt in this city about as large as the Empire, each one to have an engine on this plan, of one thousand two hundred horse power. These beats are calculated to go thirty six miles per hour without driving, or through to Albany in four hours and a quarter. The inventor, Vir. George W. Fellows, is one of the polite and accommodating stewards of one of the Hudson River stramboats.

A LAND PIRATE .- THE READERS OF THE SUN may have noticed in its columns an article advertised, called Castor Oil Candy. Well, it has been meanly counterfeited. This, now, is important to the public, who shall be guarded against imposition. The name of the offender will not be given to-day; let the law take its course, then the public will know who the unprincipled culprit is. Though he calls himself a geutlemon, I shall follow nim up until there is nothing left of him to disturb the instrumental to the genuinc and left of him to disturb the just popularity of the genuine and original Wild's Castor Oil Caney. For my part, I should consider him more honorabla if he came, like a thief, in the night, and robbed my purse. No: but he steals my good name, which cost him nothing. Let the finger of scorn be pointed at him see that he have the pointed at him, and as he walks the street, let him have the honor of being called the gentleman-robber of a citizen's rights.
